Retour sur l'After Doc'SHS #2

After Doc' Social Sciences & Humanities #2

After the success of its 1st edition, a new After Doc' was organized in Paris on February 12, 2019.

It allowed almost 50 participants, PhD candidates and holders, to discover the careers of four speakers - who hold a PhD in social sciences and humanities - or hire and work with them in the private sector - and to exchange with them during an informal networking session.

Here are some highlights from this event.

How I defined my career plan step by step

Defining your career plan is never easy. It takes time, requires a lot of introspection and network. Here is the testimonial of a doctorate holder who went through different steps and many questions before finding her way.

Be the recruiter's Christmas tree!

We are only a few days away from Christmas and your tree sits in your living room. Perhaps you had trouble deciding which tree would be best suited to your space. Indeed, choosing a tree is not an exact science and your family certainly does not have the same vision of the ideal tree as you do. Sometimes you choose a tree that doesn't look like the one you originally imagined.

All this can also happen during the recruitment process: it's time to turn yourself into the recruiter's Christmas tree!

Medical writing according to Elodie PAUWELS, PhD in genetics

Medical writer is a communication profession, accessible to people with a solid scientific background. It is therefore a "natural" option for PhDs interested in a career far from the bench, but not so far from research.

Met during a Career Afterwork, organized by the MAASCC (the career development center for scientists at Pasteur Institute), Elodie Pauwels, PhD in genetics, agreed to answer our questions. With her 5 years experience as medical writer, she shares with us her background, her experience and sheds light on this profession in this ABG interview.

Online skills portfolio for PhDs

www.mydocpro.org

Skills portfolio for PhDs:

- 24 skills
- 3 levels (matching the career development of PhDs)

The screenshot displays the DocPro website, which is a platform for PhDs to showcase their skills. The header includes the DocPro logo, the tagline "Le profil professionnel des docteurs", a "Connexion" button, and the MEDEF logo. The main navigation bar contains links for "Accueil", "Tout sur DocPro", "Docteurs", "Dirigeants et recruteurs", "Responsables académiques", and "Témoignages". The central area features a circular diagram with 24 skills organized into three levels: "Cœur de métier" (purple), "Qualités personnelles et relationnelles" (green), and "Stratégie et leadership" (orange). The skills are represented by colored circles and text labels. A central profile picture placeholder is also visible. Below the skills diagram, there is a "Bienvenue sur DocPro" message. At the bottom, there are buttons for "Créer un profil personnalisé" and "Rechercher des profils". The footer section includes testimonials from Jean-François Minster, Didier Georges, and Ivan Behaghel, each with a photo and a short quote.

Un docteur est quelqu'un qui a appris à travailler sur un domaine inconnu et travailler dans l'inconnu est absolument indispensable pour être manager. C'est aussi quelqu'un qui...

Il faut sortir de l'idée que le docteur est obligatoirement cantonné à un emploi de recherche et développement.

Il n'y a pas un profil type du docteur. Certaines personnes sont très attachées au fonctionnement universitaire et d'autre sont plus à l'aise dans une entreprise privée...
